Outpouring continues for family of teen killed in wreck

Organizers say fundraiser Monday night will help purchase headstone

By Ben Carlson
News staff

The outpouring for the family of a 17-year-old killed when the van he was driving hit a tree July 1 continues with a fundraiser scheduled for Monday night.

Cody Ramsey, who would have been a high school senior this year, worked part-time in the county park, and his co-workers, other county employees and fiscal court magistrates have already raised about $800 to help cover his final expenses.

On Monday, they will host a fundraiser at Edwardo's Pizza on Glensboro Road, with 15 percent of sales between 6 and 8 p.m. going to Ramsey's family to help purchase a headstone, county employee Kasey Briscoe said.

Briscoe added that county employees will wait tables and serve drinks during that time, and

Two hurt when motorcycle, SUV collide near Walmart

From staff reports

Two people were transported to a trauma center last Thursday after their motorcycle collided with an SUV at the Walmart entrance on Glensboro Road.

Lawrenceburg residents Mike and Kathy Peach were on the motorcycle at the time of the accident.

Both were transported by ambulance but their injuries did not appear to be life threatening, according to Bart Powell, of Anderson County EMS.

The driver of the SUV appeared to be uninjured.

The Kentucky State Police investigated the wreck, but did not respond to requests for additional information.

It was unclear at the scene which vehicle caused the accident, but it appeared that the SUV's front bumper struck the motorcycle.

When EMS arrived, the man and woman were both seated on the road, near the bike. Both were placed in neck braces and bandages before being loaded into waiting ambulances.

Officers with the Lawrenceburg Police Department were also at the scene.

Baker rejects councilman's request to halt watering lawns, garden

Anderson County residents have been watching the skies for a chance of rain, and may also need to watch their water usage in the coming weeks.

The Energy and Environment Cabinet recently designated Anderson County and 26 other Kentucky counties as being under a water shortage watch on Friday, July 5.

In light of Anderson County's drought conditions and water shortage watch, city council member Ken Evans proposed the city make a statement for residents to conserve water until conditions were more favorable.

City council considers cracking down on fireworks

By Meaghan Downs
News staff

The city council discussed the issue of fireworks and the appointment of an interim police chief at its July 9 council meeting.

Council member Bobby Durr asked Mayor Edwinna

Baker if the city had any sort of time limit on when fireworks start and when they end, and to think about making changes to the city's ordinance prior to next year's Fourth of July.

The mayor said she and fire chief Robert Hume had discussed making possible changes to the ordinance to present to the council for final approval.

The city does not have any specific restrictions on the books for how long fireworks can be launched or how long they can be bought or sold in city limits.

Man claims Cherokee status in defense of tickets

Brown says police 'kidnapped' and held him for 'ransom'

By Ben Carlson
News staff

A Lawrenceburg man who claims he is a member of an organization called Cherokee Country claims police "kidnapped" and held him for "ransom" following a pair of traffic stops earlier this year, according to documents on file in Anderson District Court.

Dalton Wayne Brown, 20, of 1093 Hammonds Creek Road was stopped for allegedly running a red light in February and for a seat belt violation in April. He claims that police and others violated federal treaties "by kidnapping a Cherokee Nation of Indians member," according to documents on file in Anderson District Court.

Brown

Those documents reference an organization called the "Supreme Court of Cherokee Country," but it is unclear if Brown or it filed the documents.

It is clear that "Cherokee County" is not a federally recognized organization, according to a spokesperson with the actual Cherokee Nation in Oklahoma.

all tips and donations collected will also be given to the family.

She said the community's response to Ramsey's death has been incredible.

"The generosity from you all contributed to a worthy cause and eliminated a burden that so many families face during their time of loss," Briscoe said in a letter to the editor on page A4.

Briscoe said Ramsey's death has been hard on many, including those with whom he worked in the county park.

"To the kids dealing with this loss, your words of kindness and sympathy mean so much to the Ramseys," she said. "Your visits mean even more. The pictures that you shared will provide the family with memories that they will cherish. Your prayer circles have been inspirational to all of us. I hope that each of you continue to lean on God through your healing process."

She added that Ramsey's loss has brought the entire community together. She said Judge-Executive John Wayne Conway opened the Stratton building in the county park to host a bereavement meal for Ramsey's family, and arranged for a funeral detail for his funeral procession on Main Street.

"It was nice see city and county officials, EMS, sheriff, and fire departments all working together to make sure the funeral procession was just as special as Cody," she said.

Another local business, Lucy Lou's Frozen Yogurt, collected donations for Ramsey's family and collected about $300.

A store manager said the donations were collected by Ramsey's friends who work at the yogurt shop, and donated to his family during visitation hours last week at Ritchie & Peach Funeral Home.

Donations are also being accepted at Judge-Executive John Wayne Conway's office on Main Street.

Classified as a civil offense violation, fireworks abuse could land residents a $10-250 penalty if the violation is not contested, or $25-500 if the violation is contested. Fireworks can also be seized.

No action was taken on discussion, but the mayor said she, Chief Hume and council member Larry Giles had every intention of presenting an updated version of the city fireworks ordinance for the council.

The council also unanimously approved the mayor's appointment of Lt. Chris Atkins as interim police chief.

Chief Tommy Burris, who said he would be retiring in the beginning of August, came before the council to give his last departmental report and announce his retirement.

Burris said he believed Atkins would do an excellent job as chief.

"Lt. Atkins has taken on a great deal of responsibility," Burris said. "He's a good man, he'll do a good job."

Baker agreed with Burris, adding that Atkins had been with the Lawrenceburg police department for some time.

Atkins will be acting as interim police chief for the next six months. After that time, Baker said, she and safety director and Giles will discuss next steps to fill the police chief appointment permanently.

Giles was absent from the Monday night meeting.

Evans asked that the city change its ordinance to lower the speed limit of North Main/US 127 and Glensboro Road/

Highway 44 from 45 mph to 35.

Evans cited the danger of residents pulling out of subdivisions on Main, and asked if the city could pass an ordinance to lower speeds on those roads.

The mayor said the city did not have the authority to pass an ordinance because both streets are state highways, but that another letter could be sent to the Department of Transportation to request a lower speed limit.

The council has sent a previous letter in its first request to lower the speed limit on Glensboro and North Main, but was denied action by the Department of Transportation several months ago.

Evans asked that letters also be sent to state Rep. Kim King and Congressman Ben Chandler to seek their help and influence in this election year.

The council voted 4-1 in favor of sending letters to the state department, as well as to the two state representatives.

Council member Tommy Vaughn was the sole dissenting vote, stating that he believes slower drivers are more of an issue.

about conserving water," Evans said at the July 9 council meeting on Monday. "I'd like to see something from your office to stop watering yards and gardens, at least conserving water."

Mayor Edwinna Baker said she had spoken with city water department officials and determined that no restrictions needed to be issued at present, and that the city will continue to monitor the situation.

"They tell me it was nothing compared to what it was in 1999," the mayor said of current dry conditions in the county.

The council took no action on the discussion regarding city water restrictions.

High temperatures and limited rainfall contributed to the water shortage watch, which is issued when drought conditions can threaten the availability of drinking water, the state cabinet's news release said.

Anderson, which is a part of the Bluegrass Drought Management Area, joins Bourbon, Clark, Estill, Fayette, Franklin, Garrard, Harrison, Jessamine, Lincoln, Madison, Mercer, Nicholas, Scott and Woodford counties in the water watch.

Several cities in areas under the water shortage watch have issued voluntary water restrictions, including Franklin and Mercer counties, which means residents are not required to limit their usage, but are highly encouraged to do so.

As of Tuesday morning, neither the city of Lawrenceburg water department nor the South Anderson water district had issued any water restrictions in light of the shortage watch.

Baker said at this point the city did not plan to tell customers to conserve, but should conditions continue to be dry for the next three to six weeks, the city may then issue water restrictions.

The city of Harrodsburg has issued a "voluntary conserve" guideline to North Mercer water district customers, according to a representative from the water district office.

The Farmdale water district, which purchases its water from the city of Frankfort, has also issued a voluntary conserve guideline to its water customers.

US 60 water district, which covers about 14-15 Anderson County residents, said it has not issued any water restriction guidelines, according to general manager David Hedges.

The Springfield water district said it also hasn't seen the need to ask customers to ration their water.

Trashed home still stands despite judge's deadline

By Ben Carlson
News staff

A dilapidated home on Hammond Road remains standing despite a fire chief's warning to tear it down, a district court judge's order to tear it down and the potential for $85,000 in fines.

The home, which is caving in, first made headlines over a year ago when it was declared unsafe by the county fire chief, who gave its owner, Steve Gay, 10 days to tear it down.

Gay didn't do it. Gay was then cited and ordered to appear in district court, where a judge gave him until July 5 to tear it down.

That deadline passed last week and the home still stands.

Gay was put on notice last July 29 that the house had to come down after the fire chief inspected it and neighbors complained it was filled with rodents and had become a health hazard.

That constituted a Class B misdemeanor, punishable by a fine of up to $250 per day or 90 days in jail.

Each day since constitutes an additional misdemeanor charge meaning, in theory, that Gay has piled up roughly 340 additional misdemeanors by not complying with the orders.

The jail time for a misdemeanor typically does not accumulate over time, and he would likely receive a total of 90 days in jail, if sentenced.

His attorney, Bill Patrick, appeared July 5 in front of Judge Donna Dutton and said he had not had sufficient time to speak to Gay about the issue. He asked for and was granted another court date for Aug. 2.

File photo

This home on Hammond Road was supposed to be torn down a year ago after the county fire chief declared it unsafe. It remains standing now despite a district court judge's order to tear it down that expired July 5.

Gay is charged with violating Section 641 of the zoning ordinance, which spells out a property owner's duty to maintain his or her property. Gay has yet to enter a plea to that charge, and will likely do so Aug. 2 or request a trial date be set.

CARLTON VISITS FAMILY HISTORY IN DC

Will Carlton of Lawrenceburg kneels next to the grave of his great-great aunt, Blanche Netherton Duenner at Arlington National Cemetery outside of Washington, DC. His aunt and her husband Robert, an Army Medical Officer were first stationed at Fort Hood in Texas, Carlton said in an email to The Anderson News. There, they became good friends with an up-and-coming Army general, Dwight Eisenhower, and his wife Mamie. After World War II, Robert was stationed at an Army hospital in Washington, DC, and remained there once Eisenhower was elected president. His and her husband were frequent guests of the Eisenhower's at the White House. Mrs. Duenner's sister, Ona Netherton Gritton, taught at Harrodsburg High School for over 30 years and her niece, Naomi Gritton Brown, is a 1934 graduate of Harrodsburg High School and taught at Anderson County High School 25-plus years.

LIGHTNING STRIKES SAME SPOT TWICE

Don Hurst stands in front of a scarred white oak that stands in his backyard about 15 feet from his house on Baxter Ridge Road. It was struck by lightning during a thunderstorm July 1. Hurst, 77, was born at the residence and remembers when it was struck by lightning once before — more than 50 years ago. It lived through that strike but he said he didn't think it would this time. The tree is 4 ½ feet in diameter, according to Hurst's son, Mark. The force of the strike split the tree in three different places, on both sides of the former strike. The old strike damage is still visible at Don's left. The lightning strike threw bark several feet and damaging a building housing a flower shop owned by his wife, Boneva. It made holes in a portion of the vinyl siding and forced open the electric box blowing the end off a 15-amp fuse.

Stolen car triggers Crime Stoppers reward offer from police

More questions than answers about sale of ECC land, building

School district refuses to release appraisal

Column as I see 'em ... Count me among the many still scratching their heads at the tremendous deal the Christian Academy got in buying the old Early Childhood Center building and land for $75,100.

Frankly, I couldn't be happier for those folks, especially considering the hard work and due diligence they did before making what turned out to be the only bid on that building.

But that doesn't mean there aren't some lingering questions for the school district, which voted unanimously to sell a 46,000 square-foot building and 7.5 acres of land its own appraiser said was worth $170,000, for less than half of that amount.

Even that number seems incredibly low when compared to the most recent tax assessment — yes, publicly owned buildings are assessed. According to the state Property Value Administrator's office, the 2007 assessment of the building and land came in at $3 million, a whopping 40 times the sales price.

Consider, too, that the academy paid roughly $1.60 per square foot for the old ECC, and that initial cost estimates showed that the school district spent $150 per square foot for the new ECC.

Like I said, the sale is a head-scratcher, particularly among those who dabble or make a living in real estate.

Those I know in the biz were flabbergasted over the article in last week's paper about the sale. Some reckoned that the 7.5 acres of property alone would be worth considerably more than 75 grand, even if a buyer spent a couple hundred thousand to raze the old building.

Others pointed out that a mortgage on $75,000 would be covered two or three times over each month thanks to the Regional Training Center, which the academy said last week is going to continue renting space at the old building.

I know that news made me scratch my head because, earlier this year, the school board debated moving RTC into Turner Elementary before tabling the discussion around the same time it prepared to unload the old building.

Hmm.

Others questioned the school district's diligence in maximizing a public asset by making no effort to market the location.

Even if there were a desire among the district to have that campus continue to serve in education, they said not contacting various colleges and learning centers to encourage bids was inexplicable.

Although the district is bound by goofy federal rules that wouldn't allow it to rehab the old building, private schools such as the Christian Academy are not, and others could have considered the location an ideal satellite campus.

Me? I can't help but wonder about the district's long-range building plans and how that property might have been used.

About a month ago, the school board gave its preliminary OK to a four-year plan that calls for the construction of a $7 million alternative school. It was said at the time that the district would need to acquire land for that building, and it seems particularly short-sighted to virtually give away 7.5 prime acres then turn around in a year or two and spend considerably more to buy land.

Granted, all of the above is pure speculation because neither I nor those who weighed in have access to a document taxpayers paid to have produced but are not being allowed to see.

I intended to produce another news story about the sale this week but struck out in my effort to get a copy of the appraisal. The school superintendent gave me the appraisal amount last week over the phone, and initially offered me a chance to take a look at it in her office.

Shame on me for instead asking her to email a copy because it didn't take long for her to change her mind and say no.

I despise being told no, so I made a formal request to view the appraisal through the Open Records Act, but was again turned down with a very vague response.

I asked again and was told no a third time when the superintendent and her attorneys rejected my request by citing a specific portion of the statute that deals with appraisals used for property acquisitions, not sales.

Rather than beat what is for now a dead horse, I've decided to forward my request to the state Attorney General's office to see who's right.

While I certainly have no reason to doubt the veracity of the appraisal — local appraiser Randy Birdwhistell produced it — myself and others are very curious to see if it includes information that could explain why a building and property of that size sold so cheaply.

Stay tuned.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Community outpouring for Cody Ramsey was tremendous

To the editor:

I would like to thank so many of you in this community for the outpouring of support that was offered to the family of Cody Ramsey during the difficult and trying time following his death.

It was refreshing to see the small-town values that still exist within our growing community.

Brian Ritchie was so caring and professional and he, along with his staff, did an outstanding job with the visitation, funeral services and arrangements for Cody. Death is never easy for a family, but a sudden death can be overwhelming for a family.

Brian went above and beyond for the Ramsey family and for that, I am so grateful and the Ramsey family is also.

John Wayne Conway, our county judge-executive, opened up the community building to offer a place to hold a bereavement meal for family and friends after the funeral. He also arranged the special funeral details that were along Main Street during Cody's funeral procession.

It was nice see city and county officials, EMS, sheriff, and fire departments all working together to make sure the funeral procession was just as special as Cody.

To the City of Lawrenceburg, thank you so much for making that phone call to see what you could do to help out. The family is grateful more than you know. Your thoughtfulness is deeply appreciated.

The members of Mt. Pleasant Baptist Church and Tyrone Baptist Church both jumped on board with the county employees to provide the bereavement meal after the funeral. My family and friends along with the church members helped get everything set up so that I could attend the funeral with my children.

We had so many of our county employees, churches, family and friends furnish food and beverages for the meal. The generosity from you all contributed to a worthy cause and eliminated a burden that so many families face during their time of loss.

To the kids dealing with this loss, your words of kindness and sympathy mean so much to the Ramseys. Your visits mean even more. The pictures that you shared will provide the family with memories that they will cherish. Your prayer circles have been inspirational to all of us. I hope that each of you continue to lean on God through your healing process.

Thank you to our local businesses that have jumped in to help a family in need. The Anderson News has been wonderful about spreading the word of our fundraisers for Cody. Edwardo's Pizza has offered to help out with a fundraiser and donate to our cause. Lucy Lou's Frozen Yogurt decided to match the donations made at their store up to $1000. Little League is hosting benefit games at the park to raise money. Thank you all so much.

Last, but certainly not least, thank you to each of you that have made monetary donations, sent flowers and gifts to the funeral home, sent food to the Ramsey house, the funeral home, or the bereavement meal, sent a sympathy card, made a visit, a phone call, or any other gesture that lets this family know that you are thinking about them in their time of sorrow.

The collaboration of our community during this tragedy is honorable. It makes us all very appreciative to be a part of a town that comes together to provide the needs to some of our own. The amount of thank yous from the Ramsey family cannot be counted.

I cannot take credit for the things that each of you have done.

I have had so many hugs, spoken thanks, text messages, and even Facebook messages from the Ramsey's and their family and friends and I just wanted to share their appreciation with those who deserve it. God Bless you all.

Program to teach diabetics to take control

Approximately 3.8 percent of the residents of Anderson County have been diagnosed with diabetes.

The national average is 7.8 percent. That makes Anderson County look good.

However, if you or your loved one has diabetes, then it doesn't matter what the percentages are. It's still a concern for you.

Whether you have been recently diagnosed or have had diabetes for a long time, the 12-week class on Taking Ownership of Your Diabetes will help you learn about living with and managing diabetes.

Treatment of diabetes has changed over the last four decades.

It was once common to severely restrict sugar and almost anything that was tasty was off the eating plan for someone with diabetes.

Meal planning is very different now. Almost anything can be eaten as long as it is in moderation. All carbohydrates count, not just sugars, when considering what you eat.

Some carbohydrates are better than others. A food that includes significant fiber is more beneficial than a food that is mostly starch or sugars.

Both are still carbohydrates.

So someone who eats bread instead of sweets isn't really better off.

Sugar free isn't what it seems either. Many sugar free foods are not calorie free or some aren't even calorie reduced. If you read the labels for some sugar free foods, they contain more fat and more calories than the standard product, i.e. sugar free chocolate chip cookies or sugar free candy.

Instead of focusing exclusively on what you eat, it may be wise to consider how much you move such as how active you are. Increased activity is a valuable part of controlling diabetes for life.

Taking Ownership of Your Diabetes will help you or your loved one manage diabetes successfully. Each class is one hour long and includes the opportunity to sample delicious new recipes, which are only available to those who attend the class.

Each class will also include some activity. A separate walking program is also in the planning stages.

The one-hour classes are designed to fit into the weekly schedule for most adults and allow time for questions. Most likely your health care provider has discussed these subjects with you. However, recent surveys suggest that many patients don't ask questions of the medical provider even when given the opportunity.

You will have many opportunities to ask questions and share your experience if you desire to.

Taking Ownership of Your Diabetes includes the following subjects: diabetes basics; managing diabetes; physical activity and diabetes; the ABC's of diabetes-A1C, blood pressure and cholesterol; carbohydrate counting; plate method of managing meals; monitoring blood glucose; foot care; and working with your health care team.

Taking Ownership of Your Diabetes is a statewide health management program sponsored by the University of Kentucky Extension Service, the College of Agriculture and cooperating partners such as the Anderson County Health Department.

The 12-week program is free.

Register by calling the Anderson County Extension Office at 839-7271 or the Anderson County Health Department at 839-4551.

Where did all the thinkers go?

I was complaining about technology. Again.

This was not a new conversation. It's one I repeat time and time again, with friends, family, random people in line at the grocery store, and most recently, my cousin, a self-professed technophile.

"This is the best time to be living in," he told me, as my SUV purred along the highway and he pored over the glow of his smart phone.

For him, technology is an exciting, revolutionary. An evolution of industries building toward a brighter, better future.

In my mind, technology equals anxiety.

I'm trapped in an invisible, endless loop of information.

I'm chained down by chargers, cables and the slow beeps of my dying smart phone.

Every device, every portal demands a new look to see what came over the wire in the last 30 seconds.

We can know all through the touch of a button, but we can only understand information from a distance. We only take the time to process the highlights, as opposed to digging deep.

And it's come to the point in which it no longer matters where we've gotten information, as long as it is available whenever we require it.

Is it even important anymore to understand how we receive information anymore?

Recently, the popular podcast and public radio show “This American Life” reported that Journatic, a company that produces “hyper-local” news for national and regional newspapers and websites, had been outsourcing its news to the Philip-pines.

That’s right. Writers who lived a world away reporting on the state of real estate and community education news of Chicago suburbs, places they had never even seen before.

To put it into perspective for Anderson News readers, imagine someone trying to report about the Bur-goo Festival while living and working in the Sahara Desert.

Of course, the news of Journatic’s practices shocked many in the world of journalism.

Which is typical, because this kind of business practice would not shock anyone else.

It’s no secret that it’s becoming less important to understand how things came to be.

Take the ruling on Obamacare. News outlets rushed to report whether the individual mandate was overturned or upheld.

In their haste to utilize to-the-second technology, some news outlets — notably CNN and Fox News — got it completely wrong.

The cynical side of myself says this is indicative of the way news is done now — publish first, correct later. Not that I agree with that philosophy; I reject it wholeheartedly.

But I think there’s more to it. As a society, we no longer care about the person behind the byline, the face behind the blog, the thinking behind important legislative action.

We want information, in the palm of our hands. And we want it now, regardless of inaccuracies.

It’s not my intention to use this column as a soapbox proposing we all live as hermits. Lord knows how I would survive without a microwave.

But I’d like to believe that the age of critical thinking hasn’t passed us by, that we can arrive at conclusions about important issues without ignoring the process completely.

Only it’s getting harder and harder to believe.

In other news, I was happy to hear council member Bobby Durr address the city’s lack of a proper fireworks ordinance at Monday night’s council meeting.

It’s easy to be nonchalant about fireworks, but I do think the city has been remiss in establishing limitations to when fireworks can be sold and how long they can be used in Lawrenceburg.

Sure, residents who complain about fireworks abuse can hope for a nuisance citation to be issued.

But with last year’s change to allow more powerful consumer fireworks to be sold in Kentucky, it’s necessary (and has been necessary for a while) to construct parameters for fireworks for the safety of city dwellers.

Long drinks better than short for thirsty plants

Caliente. Heiss. Chaud. Het. Those are just a few other words that mean hot in Spanish, German, French and Norwegian (I couldn’t resist).

I just thought you’d like a few other terms to use while we’re sweating bullets in this heat. Even I think it’s hot, and that takes some doing.

I bet many of you are thanking your lucky stars that you mulched the garden. If you mulched some things and not other, you’ll see a big difference in how the plants are handling the heat. If you didn’t mulch at all and continue to till or pull weeds, it’s not too late to change your mind. Layers of newspaper, covered in straw, go a long way to keep moisture in the soil.

A little shade can be put up as well. A make-shift canopy or tarp that relieves some of the afternoon sun from the garden will help as well.

Cheryl Steenerson
Columnist

Just as we need plenty of water to stay hydrated in this heat, so do our plants. I drink at least a gallon of water a day in this heat.

Our plants need at least an inch of water a week, but with this heat, I’d say more.

Water plants in the early morning, before the sun gets too hot. A long drink is better than short shots. A long drink is letting the hose run there for 15 minutes. Flood the area if you can. Frequent short waterings just give you shallow roots that dry out quicker than the deep ones.

Now is the time to give your tomato plants calcium. You can use eggshells or oyster shells that you get at the farm store. Work a few tablespoons into the topsoil around the plant and water well. This will help prevent blossom end rot later on.

Speaking of tomatoes, some scientists revealed interesting news last week. Years ago, heirloom tomatoes used to get red ripe, but still have some dark green on the shoulders. Hybrids eventually got rid of that trait, but now scientists have found that those green shoulders are flavor savers. So, if you see heirlooms on the market, with a little dark green on the top, those are flavorful tomatoes.

Just cut the green off. If you have some time after watering everything, there are other things on the July to-do list. Check your bean leaves for holes and the caterpillar that’s causing them. Dust with baby powder every 10 days to keep them from eating your plant.

Cucumber beetles are also out and the cause of sudden wilting and death of a cucumber, cantaloupe and melon plants. Dust with baby powder. Keep an eye on your squash plants now. If you see some gray mold around the flowers, remove what you can and improve the air circulation around the plant. It’s the weather that causes this stuff and the squash will rot on one end.

I took some days off last week to pick berries and plant the fall garden. It was Het. I’m delaying planting the bottom bed that I reserved for fall crops. I have to hand carry the water down there.

The little house garden has hose access, but I’m still going to wait a week to put stuff in the ground. No sense stressing out plants even more. We’ll have time. I’m planting broccoli, cauliflower, cabbage and more potatoes.

With the stress of the heat putting our plants through the ringer, don’t forget to give them a dose of chamomile tea. This gives plants a healthy boost, which helps them deal with pests and disease. Steep five bags in a gallon of water and give each plant a cup, or spray the plant in the early morning.

Now, get out pen and paper and write yourself a big note to post on the refrigerator. Write “Count the number of fogs in August.” The number of fogs in August portends the number of big snow dumps we’ll have in winter. Just thinking about snow now might even cool you off a little. I think I’ll make my own with some watermelon and ice cubes in the blender. Snow cones, anyone?

Happy growing.

Central Kentucky residents called to participate in study

From staff reports

Residents throughout Central Kentucky have an opportunity to participate in the American Cancer Society’s Cancer Prevention Study-3 (CPS-3), being conducted Aug. 7-11.

Men and women between the ages of 30 and 65 who have never been diagnosed with cancer are needed to participate. CPS-3 will enroll a diverse population of up to half a million people across the United States and Puerto Rico.

The opportunity for local residents to enroll in CPS-3 is being made possible in partnership with Saint Joseph Cancer Center, part of KentuckyOne Health, and the YMCA of Central Kentucky.

According to the press release, “CPS-3 will help researchers better understand the lifestyle, environmental, and genetic factors that cause or prevent cancer.”

To enroll in the study, individuals will be asked to read and sign an informed consent form; complete a comprehensive survey packet that asks for information on lifestyle, behavioral, and other factors related to individuals’ health; have your waist circumference measured; and give a small blood sample.

Upon completion of this process, the American Cancer Society will send periodic follow-up surveys to update information. The in-person enrollment process takes approximately an hour to complete. Periodic follow-up surveys will be sent every few years. For more information or to learn how to become involved with CPS-3, visit cps3kentucky.org, email cps3@cancer.org, or call toll-free 888-604-5888.

Matthew Sprague and Tori Yeaste pose for a photo in May after it was announced they had been appointed to the Air Force Academy. Both have since reported for duty.

Anderson grads Yeaste, Sprague report to Air Force Academy

From staff reports

Matthew Sprague, a son of Jeff and Linda Sprague, and Tori Yeaste, a daughter of Ed and Ginger Yeaste — both recent graduates of Anderson County High School in Lawrenceburg, Kentucky — entered the United States Air Force to begin Basic Cadet Training, the Air Force announced last week.

Sprague and Yeaste were appointed along with 1,033 applicants from across the United States to attend the United States Air Force Academy in Colorado Springs, Colo.

More than 12,000 students nationwide applied to receive an appointment to the Air Force Academy this year, according to a news release.

Successful applicants not only had to demonstrate tremendous ability and potential in the areas of academics, athletics, leadership, and character, they had to receive a nomination from their US senator or congressman or the vice president.

The Air Force Academy is a four-year college, which emphasizes the technical skills Air Force officers are expected to master. It offers 31 different majors from English to engineering, and biology to legal studies.

A world-class academic institution, it also focuses on leadership training and development.

Every cadet receives the equivalent of an all-expenses paid full scholarship worth over $400,000.

Over the course of four years, Sprague and Yeaste can expect to experience many of the opportunities and challenges typical for Air Force members, including flight training, parachute training, deployment exercises, command and control opportunities and travel throughout the world.

In four years, Sprague and Yeaste will graduate from the Air Force Academy with a bachelor of science degree and be commissioned as a 2nd lieutenants in the United States Air Force.

Students interested in pursuing an appointment to the Air Force Academy, or in attending the summer seminar following their junior year, can find more information at www.academyadmissions.com, or contact the academy's Kentucky Admissions Liaison Officer Director, Lt. Col. Tim Moore, at 270-769-5878.

Firefighters work to air out a Paula Drive residence after putting out a small fire in the home's bathroom July 6.

Candle blamed Friday fire

From staff reports

Residents were evacuated from a small fire at 1010 Paula Drive late Friday morning

Anderson County Fire Chief Mike Barnes said someone at the residence had lit a candle on the countertop next to flammable material in the bathroom.

No one was injured in the fire, he said. Barnes said the bathroom was pretty burnt up from the smoke, but that residents should be able to continue living in their home.

Anderson County fire, sheriff's office, EMS and city fire and rescue responded to the scene.

Stringtown honors its mothers through new album

By Meaghan Downs
News staff

With a name like Tammy Wynette, you must be born to be a musician.

Lawrenceburg resident Tammy Wynette Stratton, member of the bluegrass group Stringtown, said she believes her mother, Inez Hahn, wanted her to be exactly that since birth.

Inez supported her daughter's interest in music all her life. She bought her daughter drums, Tammy's principal instrument, when she was 14.

When Tammy's mother was dying from cancer in 2009, Inez heard Stringtown for the last time.

Three years later the Anderson County band wants to give back to the memories of their mothers, some of their biggest musical influences, through the new album "Medals for Mothers."

"They're gone, my mom's gone, but there's still that effort to please her," Tammy, who plays mandolin for Stringtown said. "She's still the reason I'm singing, she did that before I was born, with that name."

The members of Stringtown — Tammy Statton, her husband Anthony Stratton, Ellery Milburn and Kevin Chilton — attribute their musical roots to growing up with and around musicians.

Kevin's father Leon played the banjo for more than 50 years with many notable bluegrass musicians, he said.

"It was amazing to watch what he'd do," Kevin said, adding it was an emotional experience to watch his father play. "He was a very powerful player."

But it wasn't until Kevin was 13 that he wanted to learn how to master the banjo, believing it to be a good way to get girls.

He fell in love with the banjo instead, sitting out all night trying to learn a roll his dad taught him until "the dew was falling on me."

"I play for a lot of reasons, but the main reason I play is for him," Kevin said of his father.

Anthony's grandfather Obed knew how to play every instrument, and his older brother was in a rock n' roll band, Anthony said.

Joyce Stratton, the sole living mother of the women dedicated in the album, said Anthony's been playing guitar since he was little. She said she planned on attending the band's CD release party for "Medals for Mothers" in Lexington.

"I think it's wonderful," Joyce said of finding out the album was partially dedicated to her. "I'm just sorry the other mothers didn't know it, too. They were lovely ladies."

Ellery, who plays bass and is the minister of music at Sand Spring Baptist Church, remembers watching his grandmother play the organ and piano, and the jamming sessions that occurred at family gatherings.

"There was always music around Granny Milburn's house," he said.

Granny's music found its way onto Stringtown's album in the form of an original track entitled "Granny's Alto," written by Ellery. "Medals for Mothers" is about their parents, he said, but it's also about the importance of family.

Six of the 13 songs on the album were composed by members of the band or musicians close to band members, Anthony said.

"Andy's Theme" is dedicated to a fellow lover of music, Anthony's nephew Andy Stratton. One song was written by a Salvisa musician close to the band.

And of course, there's "Medals for Mothers," the title track recorded in one-take in Stringtown's recording studio on Primrose Lane.

Tammy said the song is an emotionally difficult one. She was able to perform it several times for her mother before she died, but said she's not sure about what it's going to be like singing it live at the CD release party on July 10.

"By some strength, I was able to sing it to [her mother] several times," Tammy said.

Stringtown's sound is what the band considers "bluegrass and beyond," a contemporary version of the bluegrass twang and its "high and lonesome" tones.

Together since 2001, Stringtown has performed at many churches, outdoor concerts and bluegrass festivals.

The band's ability to adapt to the audience is what makes Stringtown so popular, Ellery said, by giving in to a rock n' roll audience's thirst for a cover of "Free Bird," or breaking into an Elvis tune.

But the band hasn't been able to play together as much as they used to for the past few years, what with the family situations at home. Kevin lost his mother, Connie Chilton, in 2008; Ellery lost his mother as the album neared completion.

"Mentally, physically and emotionally, you're not able to," Ellery said.

Despite the hardships, Anthony said he'll continue to say the same thing about Stringtown's future.

"We're going to play until we quit having fun," he said.

Buzz about bees

Former television producer discovers another world through beekeeping

By Meaghan Downs
News staff

Barbara Gillette leans closely to the small plot of corn stalks in her backyard garden. “Do you hear that?” she asks and pauses, the silence filling with the quiet hum of her honeybees harvesting corn pollen.

Gillette, who set up her first honeybee hives on her Wildcat Road farm and her honey product line “Honey and Herbs on Wildcat” in 2007, says beekeeping is like gardening, or writing.

It’s a kind of therapy. “It’s a very calming activity. You wouldn’t think so,” Gillette, who moved to Lawrenceburg in 1997, said. “I think it’s calming because you have to be patient. You have to go slowly, put everything out of your mind except for the bees.”

It’s early in the morning, so the bees are pretty gentle, Gillette says.

She pulls on a protective beekeeping coat, gloves and veil (all white because bees hate black, which reminds them of predators) over her clothes and starts to waft smoke over the hive.

“Hello, girls,” she said, lifting a wooden frame of honeycomb thick and dark with the fuzzy, buzzing worker honeybees.

The “girls” are worker bees, all sterile females who collect pollen and nectar for the hive.

The male drone bees basically exist to mate with the queen, Gillette said, and to beg for food from the other bees.

It’s the structure of this bee society and the specific roles the bees hold that Gillette finds most interesting.

“Everybody has a job; it’s like the perfect society,” Gillette said. “I think that’s why you hear so many sayings about bees.”

One queen bee rules the hive. If there’s two, one queen will leave the hive with about half the hive in a “swarm” to set up a new hive.

If the old queen chooses not to make room for the new one, it’s a battle to the death.

“Whoever comes out alive is the new ruler,” Gillette said.

Swarms are common — Gillette said she had about five swarms occur this past spring — and can be unpredictable. In 2009, Gillette said she looked at her hemlock tree and discovered a swarm had built a 3-foot cone.

“Course, I panicked,” Gillette said.

Fellow Anderson County resident and beekeeping mentor Ruth Carleton came by with her husband to help Gillette, and just clipped the branch with the hive off and put it in a box.

“And I’ve been catching my own swarm ever since,” Gillette said.

Since starting Honey and Herbs, Gillette learned that the honey locust and tulip poplar trees, common in this part of Kentucky, produce a lighter, sweeter honey not found in the more common clover and wildflower varieties.

Gillette has also learned that her biggest concern as a beekeeper is pesticides, which can affect the quality, color and taste of the honey.

“For me, because I’m small, I don’t worry about it,” Gillette said, adding that she knows her neighbors don’t use chemicals that could harm her honey crop. “And my main concern is the health of the bees.”

Outside of man-made pesticides, the bees have another predator — the skunk.

Skunks enjoy the taste of the insects, not the honey, and Gillette constructs chicken wire to keep them out.

Besides skunks, bee stings also come with the territory of being a beekeeper. Gillette says she’s been stung about half a dozen times in the six years she’s kept hives.

But she’s always been an insect lover since childhood, so she was never scared of the bees.

At the end of the season, Gillette said, she’ll harvest about

Fast facts about beekeeping

- The queen bee will only mate two or three times in her life, and carries enough eggs in her body to last five years
- At the peak of the honey season, Gillette said, each of her hives will be home to about 60,000 bees.
- Gillette estimated that Anderson County is home to about a dozen residents who harvest their own honey.
- Official Kentucky State apiarist or beekeeper Sean Burgess said there are 47 official beekeeping clubs in Kentucky, and thousands of Kentuckians who maintain hives in the state.
- Langstroth hives, which is the method Gillette uses, consist of four-sided boxes known as hive bodies or hive supers stacked on top of one another. Each box will typically hold about 10 moveable “foundation” frames covered in beeswax. A deep hive body is used as the “brood chamber,” where the queen lays her eggs. The more shallow hive bodies are used for storing honey.
- Gillette said she purchased her hives and beekeeping equipment for about $300 in 2007. She says that the hobby is not as time-consuming as most people think, but it is a hot, sticky and often difficult job. She offered advice for the aspiring beekeeper: “Go out and buy yourself a good book, read up on it and take the beginning beekeeping class at [Kentucky State University]. Excellent course.”

300-400 pounds of honey from her six hives.

Some of the honey will be extracted, collected and bottled, while some will go into making Gillette’s skincare, ointments, salves and beeswax candles, all sold at the Lawrenceburg Farmers Market, located north on the US 127 bypass.

A board member of the Farmers Market in Lawrenceburg, Gillette said it’s rewarding when a Farmers Market customers enjoys using one of her products.

But Gillette learns something new every year about her bees, she said, and is constantly surprised by them.

Gillette, a former print journalist and broadcast television producer with more than 22 years of experience, keeps a beekeeping log like many other apiarists. She’s been working for four years on a book about the calendar year according to mother nature, such as when “I have to,” she said about continuing to write. “It’s like gardening or beekeeping for me. I have to.”

For more information about Honey and Herbs on Wildcat, or for questions on beekeeping and honey products, contact Gillette via e-mail at bgwrite9@yahoo.com.

Gillette uses smoke — made up of paper, natural woods and pine needles — to keep the bees from getting too aggressive and making it difficult for her to harvest honey. Gillette said she expects her six hives to produce about 300-400 pounds of honey this season, which lasts from spring to early fall.

Gillette also tends a 30x30 square foot herb garden in her backyard, and spent eight years studying Kentucky native plants and wildflowers.

Honeybees poke their heads back into the honeycomb in fright, beekeeper Barbara Gillette said. This is a foundation frame of the brood chamber where the honeybees lay eggs for more bees to hatch.

VACATION BIBLE SCHOOL 2012 - God lead Israel from Egypt to the promise land and God will lead those who follow him to heaven. The lessons for this year's vacation bible school review the exodus out of Egypt to the promise land. The primary message God leads and takes care of His people and those whom will follow have the promised land. Those whom chose not to follow God will suffer dire consequences for their rebellion.

- Day 1 Out of Egypt - God the one who leads his people
- Day 2 On the Way to Sinai - God helps us on the way
- Day 3 Lost in the Wilderness - Rebellion to God's leadership
- Day 4 Finally Home - Crossing into the Promised Land
- Day 5 We're Headed to Heaven - Different Journey with the Same God

Legion and Auxiliary honor veterans on the Fourth

From staff reports
The American Legion Auxiliary Unit 34 celebrated the Fourth of July by inviting veterans and other parade participants to the Legion clubhouse for hot dogs, chips, cookies and soft drinks prior to the start of the parade. Unit members decorated two 16-foot trailers with patriotic decorations for veterans and American Legion family members to ride on in the parade. Trailers were provided by David Montgomery with Ted Montgomery as the driver and All Through the House with Jacob Hibbs as the driver. When the parade completed the tour through downtown, the veterans gathered at the Lawrenceburg Green. Each veteran spoke about where he served, which war or military engagement, and the number of years of service. Unit 34 members, as well as our veterans, look forward each year to the parade and recognition of their service., organizers said.

CLEANING THE PIPES

Organ pipes by the hundred surround Charles L. Higgs as he prepares to clean and tune a 6-foot metal diapason monster at First Baptist Church in 1962. This pipe produces a bass tone. At left standing upright, are wood flute-toned pipes and in front of them the oboes and at right the Fox Humana pipes. The large pipes at bottom of photo are Dulciana bass. It took four men about four days to service the 786 pipes in the organ. There were six or seven times this many pipes scattered in several rooms during the operation at First Baptist.

PIPE CLEANING TAKES MONEY, LITERALLY

John Louis Hume, son of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Hume of Alton Station, graduated from the College of William and Mary in Williamsburg, Va.

He received a bachelor of arts degree in business administration with specialization in accounting and economics.

He is married to the former Brenda Adams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Reo Adams of Alton Station.

Groundbreaking ceremonies were held for the new Woodford Hospital. The building program was initiated by a $400,000 gift from Mrs. Oakey Logan Alexander.

July 12, 1962

It takes real money to clean pipe organs ... paper money, that is, and $10,000 bills can't be beat, so Charles L. Higgs says. Higgs was tuning, voicing and cleaning the instrument at First Baptist Church in 1962.

Of course $1, $5, $10 or any other bill can be used just as well since they are all made out of the same paper ... a fine lintless rag content paper for which no substitute has ever been found for cleaning under the brass tongues. While he talked, Higgs used a $1 bill and his assistant for 20 years, George Martin, used a $5 bill.

The organ had been installed 38 years before. It has 61 keys on each of the two manuals, and 32-foot pedals. Replacement cost in 1962 was estimated to be between $18 and $20,000, according to Higgs.

"You may be arrested for robbery" was an ad campaign by Hendry Motors. They said their prices were so good it was a steal.

Anderson County Adult Education Center welcomes new directors

From staff reports

The Anderson County Adult Education Center has recently named a new adult education director and a full-time community education director, according to a press release from the center.

Jerry Shaw, a long-time GED instructor in Anderson County, has been named the new director of adult education. Shaw began volunteering at the center in 2002 and he has worked both part-time and full-time at the center since then. Shaw replaces former director Darlene Urban, who retired in April.

Jacqueline Zeller, a longtime employee at the center, has taken on the job of community education director. She has 12 years of experience working with directors Laverne Brumley, Barbara Thomas and Darlene Urban.

The center is also currently undergoing a major change to the way it serves students, according to the press release.

Beginning July 19-20, students will be going through an orientation process that will screen them for sight and/or vision problems. They will complete initial enrollment forms and be tested in reading and math, and the results of the testing will be used to place students into classrooms with other students working at the same skill levels.

Classes at the center will start July 23 and will run in six-week cycles. New students will be accepted at any time and will be placed in appropriate classes based on their test scores, and will have access to one-on-one tutoring during scheduled lab times.

For students who work or have child care issues, class times will be staggered throughout the day and week.

Students will also have access to an on-line tutoring program available through the center, and will be screened for basic computer skills and will be offered classes dealing with life skills.

GED graduation held June 11

The Adult Education Center held its annual graduation ceremony June 11 at Anderson County High School.

Graduating students were Leslie M. Abner, Amanda K. Bishop, Tabitha M. Britton, Jordan D. Brown, John C. Caudill, Sharon L. Dennemann, David M. Hall, Kalen R. Hilbert, Curtis W. Humphrey, Barbara A. Lewis, Ronald P. Mangeot, Mari J. Martin, Brianna Miller, Heather L. Owen, Thuan T. Pham, Nicole A. Riggs, Glynn E. Roberts and Caitlynn M. Robinson.

Joani Clark presented six students with certificates inducting them into the National Adult Education Honor Society.

The honor is given to GED students who perform exceptionally well in the classroom and on the GED exam, according to a news release.

Students recognized for their high achievement were Amanda K. Bishop, Curtis W. Humphrey, Ronald P. Mangeot, Mari J. Martin, Heather L. Owen and Nicole A. Riggs.

Attending the ceremonies as special guests were state Rep. Kim King, Anderson County Schools Superintendent Sheila Mitchell, Director of Student Services Derek Shouse, Curriculum Coordinator Sharon Jackman, retired ACE director Laverne Brumley, Director of Bluegrass Community and Technical College Rhonda Wheeler, Anderson County school board members Lee Hahn and James Sargent, Deputy Judge-Executive Cheryl Peach, Beta Sigma Phi representative Joani Clark, and Joe Saunier from the Lawrenceburg Police Department.

ENGAGEMENTS

Shouse-Morris

Sean Christopher Shouse, Zachary Nelson, Paige Marie Morris and Selena Nelson

Sean Christopher Shouse and Paige Marie Morris, both of Lawrenceburg, announce their engagement and upcoming marriage in August.

There will be a small wedding held in August 2012, followed by an invitational wedding on July 20, 2013.

There really is hope for us filthy sinners

Do you ever really stop and quantify what a loving God we have?

We as humans are inherently filthy and disgusting, regarding sin. We all sin and are born in sin.

What an amazing God we have who would willingly send his son as the ultimate sacrifice or propitiation for our sin. It's hard for my simple mind to grasp the concept of a good person willingly dying for a filthy evil person. Romans 5:7-8, "For one will scarcely die for a righteous person — though perhaps for a good person one would dare even to die — but God shows his love for us in that while we were still sinners, Christ died for us."

Jess Thompson
Faith columnist

Ask yourself if you truly believe you are not responsible for the nails piercing Christ's hands. Trust me, you and I both are.

"God didn't die for frogs. So he was responding to our value as humans," author John Piper wrote in "Fifty Reasons Why Jesus came to Die."

"This turns grace on its head. We are worse off than frogs.

"They have not sinned. They have not rebelled and treated God with contempt of being inconsequential in their lives.

"God did not have to die for frogs. They aren't bad enough. We are. Our debt is so great, only a divine sacrifice could pay for it."

Can you really fathom how much you and I deserve punishment for our sinful actions and thoughts? What a mighty and wonderful gift is the grace that God provides for us.

Ephesians 1:7, "In him we have redemption through his blood, the forgiveness of our trespasses, according to the riches of his grace." Praise God almighty there is hope for you and me both.

YOUR YARD LOOKS GREAT

Your yard looks great! The flowers and shrubs are brilliant in color and your yard looks so manicured. How many hours did it take to get your yard looking so great? There are a lot of houses in Lawrenceburg that this could be said about (or at least before the drought).

Now let me use the above to ask you a very important question. If your yard was taken care of like you have taken care of your SOUL would your landscape look like a desert?

"Then Jesus said to His disciples, If anyone desires to come after Me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow Me. For whoever desires to save his life will lose it, but whoever loses his life for My sake will find it. For what profit is it to a man if he gains the whole world, and loses his own soul? Of what will a man give in exchange for his soul?" (Matt. 16:24-26). See also Mark's account in Mark 8:34-38.

All the work that you do on your yard will one day die. Everything that man has created will be burnt up with fervent heat (2 Peter 3:10-13) and the world will be no more. Yet, if you have taken good care of your soul you will be blessed with eternal life and get to enjoy the beauties of heaven. Let's cultivate our souls (Romans 12:1-2) and get them ready for eternity.

"There are only three that are federally recognized," said Lenzy Krehbiel-Burton, deputy director of communications. "Cherokee County is not recognized by the US government, and is not affiliated with the Cherokee Nation."

Attempts to reach a number listed on a Cherokee Country website were unsuccessful because it was no longer taking phone calls as of Monday.

During both traffic stops Brown handed police a Cherokee Country license before being charged with driving without a license, no insurance and other traffic violations.

During the first traffic stop, a state trooper learned that Brown was wanted on a Fayette County bench warrant and took him to jail, which Brown apparently considers being kidnapped.

District Court Judge Linda Armstrong required him to post a $500 surety bond following the February traffic stop, which he apparently considers being held for ransom.

Brown was driving a 1995 Nissan that court documents say he bought several weeks earlier from a man in Bardstown but did not register in his own name, according to court documents.

Brown was also bonded out of jail following his April traffic stop, during which police retained what he called his "Cherokee Country navigation card" and a "Cherokee County license plate," according to court records.

During that stop, Lawrenceburg Police officer Jeremy Cornish wrote in his complaint that Brown told him that his father had obtained his Cherokee Nation identification from "a machine" in Tennessee.

In March, Brown signed a consent form with the "Supreme Court of Cherokee Country," giving it consent to "adjudicate if the complaint is deemed necessary," according to court documents.

In asserting his rights, Brown wrote, "While Dalton Wayne Brown of the paint clan was in jail, they forcefully put hands on him and harmed him," according to court records.

"They stole his belongings from his body and threatened him several times," and "forced me to take a picture and fingerprints by force, all under duress."

Brown added that he as the "right to travel the earth my any means," and that he was "kidnapped and held 84 hours waiting for ransom."

He also blames police for "charging a living man with arms and legs in a dead court corp," according to court documents.

A document purporting to be from the Supreme Court of Cherokee Country contends that Cherokee Country vehicles "shall have Cherokee Country, Cherokee Nation of Indians or United Nations of Turtle Island on its plates, based on treaties still in effect, and shall not be under or bound by any state, city or federal code."

In a motion to dismiss the charges, Brown claims he cannot be prosecuted because a member of his family is an "official deputy ambassador and resident representative to the Cherokee Nation of Indians, making him a foreign diplomat of the United Nations."

Brown's file includes a page printed from a website for the International Organization of Economic Development, which claims a person named Walter Wayne Brown Jr. holds that title. The motion to dismiss also claims that the federal treaty of 1791 was breached, and claims Brown is due a "standing declaratory judgment of 1 million US dollars and five live eagles."

In another document, Brown said he wants "a fair and equitable amount for kidnapping and ransom paid, and an order to address the public officials to prevent this action from happening again."

Brown is scheduled for a jury trial in October.

BIG TOMATO

Olivia Griffin, 7, and her brother, Luke, 9, grew this giant tomato at their parents' farm on Forrest Hill Drive. They said they have been having a great summer and are sure not ready to go back to school at Turner Elementary, where Olivia will be in the second grade and Luke will be in the fourth. The children of Mark and Dawn Griffin have lots of vegetables in their garden, plus some giant sunflowers, too. The tomato was 15 inches in circumference. Mark estimated it to weigh about 2 pounds.

Student receives Kohl's Cares recognition

From staff reports

Braden Peyton of Lawrenceburg was named as a recipient of the Kohl's Cares Scholarship Program.

According to a press release from the department store chain, Kohl's will recognize more than 2,200 young volunteers nationwide who have made a positive impact in their communities through volunteerism. Thirty-two youth from Kentucky will each receive a $50 gift card and recognition certificate from Kohl's to honor their community service efforts. In 2012, Kohl's celebrates its 12th year of rewarding remarkable young volunteers.

These winners qualify for the chance to receive a $1,000 regional scholarship for post-secondary education, which Kohl's will award in July.

Looking back

much to learn

Series to examine issue locally

It might have been the defining moment of my football career. As an eighth-grader, I was a member of the Anderson County High School freshman team, listed well down the depth chart as a defensive tackle but was getting some work in a live practice session. When the center snapped the ball, a huge hole suddenly opened in front of me. Eager to make an impression, I shot through the hole looking to hit some ball carrier in the backfield. The problem was the offense had other ideas. Someone from my right, someone hit me so hard that I thought I was an Apollo astronaut without the benefit of a space capsule. To this day, I could not tell you who hit me. All I remember are those stars that served as my introduction into the workings of a trap play. Like just about everyone who put on a helmet and shoulder pads in the 1970s, I was told to shake it off and go back out there. Did I suffer a concussion? I really don't know. My guess is probably not, but I have no way of knowing and that was the last year I played any organized sport. What I do know is that times have changed drastically in the 40 years since. All along, we knew that "spearing" was dangerous. We saw that unbelievable collision with Jack Tatum that left Darryl Stingley paralyzed. You can still see it on YouTube. But no one thought about long-term problems from bumping heads. Now, we know differently. But in a time when it is popular to bash football, it is often forgotten that equipment and treatments are much better than ever before. That does not mean that injuries won't happen. They will. And they probably will happen at the high school level every Friday night. But at the same time, coaches, officials and medical personnel are making great strides in recognizing and treating head injuries. The old "You've just had your bell rung" has been replaced by the directive that if a football player even shows signs of having a concussion, he must be held out of action that day. And with strong guidelines developed by medical professionals, the return to action is closely monitored. Still, it is reasonable to ask what those in charge are doing to ensure the safety of kids playing sports. Notice, I said sports, not just football. This week starts a three-part series looking at head injuries in sport. And while, most of our focus will be on football, the research has shown that head injuries can, and do, happen in nearly every sport. This week, I look at what is going on in high school football. Next week, I talk with those who are in charge of youth football in Anderson County and also examine the importance of proper technique and conditioning. In two weeks we look at whether football has become a convenient whipping boy. While there are certainly documented long-term dangers to playing the sport, the statistics available might surprise you. In no way do we at The Anderson News claim to be pros in this area. Our intent is to pass information along to help you make an informed decision about both the risk of head injuries in sport and what is being done about it locally and beyond. There have been tremendous strides made in the last 10-15 years, but nearly all indications are those strides are just a beginning. There is still a long, long way to go. Locally, it appears that those in charge are going the best they can, but like every public entity, they are limited by budgetary constraints. But I believe they are doing their best to make sure sports are safe for kids. As they should be.

Report: Russell leaves UK football

From staff reports
Former Anderson County High School football player Jacob Russell has left the University of Kentucky football team, according to an internet report released Monday. Ira Combs, owner of Tri-State Sports Media services, reported that Russell has left the Wildcat football team and will join the UK baseball team this year. Russell, an all-state performer at Anderson County, began his college career at Eastern Kentucky University but transferred to UK after one year in order to pursue his dream of playing college football at the highest level. Despite being a walk-on at UK, Russell had worked his way up to second string in spring practice. Russell quarterbacked one team in the Blue-White spring game and scored a touchdown. Publicly, the UK coaching staff praised Russell for his knowledge of the game and work ethic. But, Combs reported, Morgan Newton, who has three years experience under his belt, was put back at No. 1 despite sitting out spring practice to rehabilitate an injured shoulder. Highly regarded freshman Patrick Towles, from Ft. Thomas Highlands, listed No. 2. Combs reported that Russell tried to get a meeting with UK coach Joker Phillips or offensive coordinator

Randy Sanders before finally getting in touch with Sanders, who gave Russell the news. Russell was also an all-state baseball player at Anderson, pitching and playing first base on two regional championship teams. Russell was also the Eighth Region basketball player in 2010. Anderson News sports editor John Herndon had learned of Russell's change and had attempted to reach Russell via his Facebook page for confirmation, but had not received a reply before leaving on vacation late last week.

NFL injuries, suicides heighten awareness as coaches work to keep players safe

By John Herndon
Sports Editor

Mark Peach remembers the day he got a concussion playing football. At least he thinks it probably was one. One day, while playing offensive tackle for Campbellsville University about 20 years ago, Peach was a bit woozy after taking a hit. But there was no blood. No broken bones. At the time, it was considered a minor thing. He'd "gotten his bell rung." "I remember one of the coaches was over on the sidelines and told me just to walk it off," Peach says. "I went back in that game." The Anderson County High School coach breaks into a bewildered smile. "Looking back on it, it is unbelievable." Believe it. It was the common way of treating athletes, especially football players, who were seeing stars or had trouble standing up after a violent hit. When there were no visible injuries, it was treated as nothing to be worried about. "He's gotten his bell rung. He'll be OK," was the common diagnosis. But after certain NFL Hall of Famer Junior Seau committed suicide earlier this year, questions about the long-term effects of blows to the head, especially concussions, skyrocketed. The same questions were raised when former Chicago Bears defensive back Dave Duerson, a member of the

Peach notes high school hits are different from NFL

By John Herndon
Sports Editor

Head injuries are common in high school sports and medical research has shown that adolescent brains are vulnerable to them. However, there is very little data on the long-term effect of head injuries on people who have not played football or other sports past the high school level. Gathering statistics for such a study is considered very difficult, given privacy laws and the failure of people to report injuries in past years.

But while there are risks, just as in any sport, it is also important to remember that high school athletes rarely experience the type of pounding that a player in the National Football League incurs. Anderson County High School football coach Mark Peach acknowledges that the risk of injury exists anytime someone puts on a uniform in any sport, but also believes the NFL is a different world. "Any time you compete, there is a chance someone will get hurt," he said. "That includes anything. You can hurt a knee. You can get a concussion. "But think about this. Junior Seau played 20 years in the NFL. "Twenty years! You figure 20 years. That is 16 games a year and that does not include pre-season, post-season or practice." Few players who suit up for high school football will have those kind of numbers. Peach also noted that NFL players are world class athletes with extra-ordinary size and speed. "Jon Gruden said it best,"

Peach says. "He said (about the NFL), 'Are you ready for the best athletes in the world to come chase you?'" And when two plays, both weighing in excess of 225 pounds and running at approximately 20 miles an hour (4.5 speed in the 40-yard dash) meet head on, the result can be spectacular. And devastating. "Some of those collisions in the NFL," Peach said. "Wow! Just Wow!"

Football head injury scrutiny has increased over time

By John Herndon
Sports Editor

Football has come a long way since the days of playing with no helmet. Next came the leather headgear, followed by molded plastic helmets with no facemask. Helmets with no internal padding - only a web of straps kept the helmet away from the head - finally gave way to padding, air suspension and the high-tech equipment worn today.

But the effects of head injuries were largely unknown until about 20-30 years ago. While research and safety measures regarding neck and spine injuries developed, the long-term effects of concussions did not receive much attention until Ralph Wenzel came along.

Wenzel, a lineman who had a seven-year career in the National Football League, died June 18 in Annapolis, Md., at age 69.

The New York Times reported that Wenzel's early-onset dementia sparked much of the recent debate about football safety.

His wife, Dr. Eleanor Perfetto, reported that his cause of death was complications from dementia.

The New York Times reported that Wenzel, who played for both the Pittsburgh Steelers and San Diego Chargers from 1966-73, began having significant memory lapses and cognitive problems at age 52. When the conditions worsened to the point he could not care for himself, he began living in a home for dementia patients in 2006.

The news article about Wenzel's death noted that during one game, Wenzel "was knocked unconscious for 5 to 10 seconds, stumbled to the wrong huddle, took a few plays off and then returned to the game."

Dr. Perfetto started running into other former players who had the same symptoms as her husband and used her husband as an example of the effect of head injuries suffered in professional football on both players and their families.

According to the Times, Dr. Perfetto described Wenzel's condition before a House Judiciary Committee in 2009, prompting the NFL to revise safety rules pertaining to head injuries and advocating changes for safety at the youth level.

The effects of the game are not limited to Wenzel.

In the past year, lawsuits have been filed on behalf of many former NFL players charging the NFL with negligence and glorifying brutality in the sport.

At this time, the lawsuits are still pending.

INJURIES

1985 Super Bowl champions, and former Atlanta Falcons safety Ray Easterling took their own lives last year.

"There is an increased awareness of the long-term effects of head injuries due to the NFL coverage and the bounty scandal involving the New Orleans Saints," said Dr. Gina Wilkins, medical director of the emergency department at Frankfort Regional Medical Center.

The Saints scandal, one of the messiest in NFL history, involved Saints coaches, including head coach Sean Payton, giving cash, or bounties, to players who could put certain opponents out of a game.

Payton was suspended without pay for all of the 2012 season, Saints' general manager Mickey Loomis will serve an eight-game suspension and assistant coach Joe Vitt will miss the first six games of the season.

Former defensive coordinator Gregg Williams, who had left the team for the St. Louis Rams, was suspended indefinitely.

Four Saints players also received suspensions with linebacker Jonathan Vilma sitting out the 2012 season.

But it was the sudden death of Seau in May that might have been the defining moment in head injury awareness.

Considered one of the game's all-time great line-backers, Seau was found dead after shooting himself in the chest. Seau's family followed Duerson's example and donated his brain to research on the long-term effects of head injuries.

"I was very saddened by Junior Seau's death," Peach said. "He was a very respected football player and person. From the outside looking in, Junior Seau was a Hall of Famer, he was well-to-do financially."

"We don't know what kind of physical and emotional problems he had."

That mystery has prompted sports, especially football, to experience more scrutiny. With Kentucky high school football teams opening practice next week, it is incumbent upon coaches like Peach to be aware and prepared.

"We try to get the best helmets we can," Peach says. "The helmets we wear are the same kind of helmets that teams wear on Saturday and Sunday."

Having equipment of the same quality worn by major college and NFL teams requires diligence.

And money. The cost of a new high school helmet is about $250, up from $90 when Peach got his first head-coaching job in 1999 at Hancock County.

The cost does not stop there, either.

"We recondition our helmets every year," Peach says.

Anderson County's helmets are

What is a concussion?

Treating visible injuries is difficult enough, but there are accepted treatments.

Set a broken bone and put some form of a cast in place. Undergo surgery to repair ligament damage to the knee. Put ice on the sprained ankle to reduce swelling.

They are all as much a part of football as the draw play and the safety blitz. They always will be.

But head injuries are different. Often, there are no visible signs of a head injury and research is still incomplete on the long term effect of repeated blows to the head.

WebMD.com defines a concussion as "a type of traumatic brain injury that is caused by a blow to the head or body, a fall, or another injury that jars or shakes the brain inside the skull."

The online article goes on to say while some people will have obvious symptoms such as passing out or forgetting what happened right before the injury, other victims won't have any visible symptoms.

The article says the brain is surrounded by spinal fluid and protected by the skull. The fluid normally cushions the brain and prevents it from banging into the skull. However, if the head of body is hit hard, the brain can crash into the skull, causing an injury.

In addition to football, the article lists boxing, hockey, soccer, skiing and snowboarding as prominent sports where concussions happen. Other common causes are fights, falls, playground injuries, automobile accidents and bike crashes.

Symptoms can include, but are not limited to, not thinking or remembering clearly, headache, blurry vision, nausea, dizziness, balance problems, emotional issues and sleep issues.

Professional medical attention and treatment is strongly advised. The article notes that most people who suffer concussions recover with proper rest.

— by John Herndon

made by Riddell, one of the major suppliers of football helmets and pads. The company makes equipment for all levels of play and determines if equipment is suitable for certain levels. For example, helmets certified for youth leagues have different standards than those used at the college or professional level.

According to the company's website, the reconditioning process "ensures that athletic equipment continues to meet the performance standards you expect."

"Annual reconditioning will not prevent injuries, but it does ensure get better because of the increased research in this area," Wilkins said.

Still, the injuries still happen at all levels. Wilkins, who has been working in emergency rooms in Frankfort and Louisville since 1999, said she did not have any sport-specific statistics concerning head injuries, but estimated that Frankfort Regional, which primarily serves the four football-playing high schools in Anderson and Franklin counties, sees about one football player a week with a head injury.

She knows of no long-term debilitating injury that can be blamed on the injury coming through Frankfort during her tenure.

That might be because of the increased awareness of the dangers of playing with a head injury.

Anderson had one significant concussion during the 2011 season. Receiver Ross Cox took a major hit during the Bearcats' game with Franklin County. The overflow crowd immediately went silent and Cox did not return to action that night. He came back to play the following week at East Jessamine.

"We have (local physical therapists) Tracy Briscoe and Brad Briscoe here on the sidelines. We have EMTs here," Peach said.

"When Ross got up, Tracy checked him out and said, 'Keep him out!' It turns out that was the best thing," Peach remembers.

Things have changed.

"I remember when I played they got you back in the game," remembers Peach, an all-state lineman at Anderson in 1988. "I remember Dr. (Lewis) Wash was on the sidelines and he had those ammonia tablets. Whew! He put those under your nose and after you smelled them, you went back in the game. That's how everybody thought they should have been treated."

"It's crazy when you look back at it. Now we are much more aware. We are much smarter about it. Thank goodness we have more info today."

KHSAA trying to educate about head injuries

By John Herndon
Sports Editor

Nearly anyone who has attended even a few football games has experienced that scary moment when two players collide full speed and one does not get up or, at best, gets up slowly and groggily.

For years, fans and media passed it off as just a temporary problem with no long-term effects.

While a knee or shoulder injury causes visible problems, a head injury or concussion was simply passed over.

Research over the years has identified the dangers of concussions in many sports, prompting the Kentucky High School Athletic Association to act.

The Association does not have comprehensive statistics on the number of head injuries in football or any other sport.

"We do not have any statistics on numbers of concussions by various sport," Elden May, a spokesman for the association, said in an email.

"We have been working with Dr. Dawn Comstock, a researcher at The Ohio State University who has been tracking injury statistics with various sports at the high school level for several years."

"Statistical information of this type is somewhat difficult to obtain for several reasons, among them patient privacy laws if they go to a hospital for treatment and the number that may be unreported if a student-athlete did not seek medical attention at the time for it."

"At this point, the nationwide numbers are about all that's out there for this issue, and those numbers are only the subjects who agree to submit this information to Ms. Comstock."

The association has tried to be proactive, however, requiring coaches to pass a required unit of training in an online sports safety training course. Without passing the course, a coach cannot work with a team.

The course is taught by David Ralston, a certified athletic trainer from Owensboro, and Julian Tackett, head of the KHSAA.

The course is available for public viewing at www.khsaa.org/safety_course. Those not required to complete the course should click the "Don't take for credit" button. The course lasts approximately 37 minutes.

The course presents an algorithm for coaches to follow. If a player shows any signs of a concussion, he may not return to play or practice that day and should have a medical evaluation that day.

The course also says officials working games have a responsibility to inform coaches of players who need to be checked out.

If a concussion is diagnosed, a player must now have written permission from a doctor to return to action.

The course stresses that player safety, regardless of its effect on winning and losing, must remain paramount to high school sports.

The association's stated policy is, "When in doubt, they sit out."

Robinson-Catlett tandem wins twice at Wild Turkey Trace

From staff reports

The team of Robby Robinson and Carol Catlett has been very successful in recent couples' night golf competitions at Wild Turkey Trace Golf Course. Last week, the tandem won for the second time in recent weeks, winning a two-person, nine-hole scramble and beating Rick and Carolee Hawkins in a playoff hole. On June 22, the team of Robinson and Catlett took first place in the two-person scramble with Shawn and Julie Black taking second place. Last week, the three-person team of Mark Lilly, Colin Cox and Danny Vernon won in the men's league play. Barb Karpowich and Carolee Hawkins both shot 45 on the back nine to tie for first place on Ladies' Night league play at Wild Turkey Trace Golf Course two weeks ago. Marie Garmon won the low putts competition that night. The men's league featured a four-person scramble on June 21 with the team of Colin Cox, Neal Fowler, Ott Elliott and Roger Cox taking first place.

Closest to the pin winners were Roger Cox on the 15th hole and Bert White on No. 13. Ladies' league winners from June 19 were Kaitlyn Riley with a 41 and Connie Goins, who shot 43, on the front nine of the local course. Carol Catlett took first place in the low putts competition.

Trigger weight, cleaning help accuracy of bolt action rifles

By Art Lander Jr.
Ky. Dept. of Fish & Wildlife Resources

For many firearms deer hunters in Kentucky, the tool of choice is the bolt-action centerfire rifle. With a little gunsmithing work and the right ammunition along with pre-season shooting practice, deer hunters will be ready to close the deal when a shooter buck walks into range this November.

The first step is to find a competent gunsmith who can accomplish three procedures: adjusting the trigger pull, free-floating the rifle's barrel and bedding its action.

Most bolt-action rifles, new ones and many used ones, will have a very heavy trigger pull, which makes it practically impossible to shoot accurately.

"The more force it takes to pull the trigger, the more the gun moves. On average, trigger pulls are set at 5 to 6 pounds at the factory," said gunsmith Mike Ezell, who lives in Auburn and specializes in rifle work.

There are two options: adjust the factory trigger or replace it with an after-market trigger.

"The ideal trigger pull is about 3 pounds, but whether or not that can be done is dictated by the design of the trigger. Some triggers can't be set that low," said Ezell. "Safety should always be the first concern when adjusting trigger pull. Installing a good after-market trigger is the best option for everybody's safety."

Trigger creep, or the distance the trigger must travel before the gun fires, can be detrimental to accuracy as well. "There has to be some creep, but your rifle should have a smooth, clean trigger pull," said Ezell.

In recent years, the manufacturers of the most popular brands of hunting rifles have improved the quality and adjustability of their triggers.

The next step to improved accuracy is focused on getting the rifle to shoot more consistent groups of shots on a target. "I've never seen a gun that didn't benefit from free-floating the barrel and glass bedding the action," said Ezell. "It's all about barrel harmonics."

The goal is to minimize the factors that contribute to erratic barrel vibrations, one major cause of inconsistent groups. Barrels vibrate in a circular motion as the bullet travels towards the muzzle, riding the grooves cut into the rifle barrel.

Free-floating a rifle's barrel is especially important on rifles with wooden stocks, since moisture and humidity can affect where and how the wood touches the barrel, causing inconsistent vibrations. Gunsmiths use files to remove wood in the barrel channel of the forend of the stock, so the barrel "floats."

Glass bedding of the action should be done at the same time as the barrel work. "You don't want the action to move in the stock," said Ezell. "The action should be solidly mounted, without twisting or stress, so it fits like a glove."

A loose screw will also cause erratic groups. The screw that holds the action in place should be tightened to the correct torque setting. The setting may vary from rifle to rifle, even those of the same make and model. Find the exact tightness of the receiver screw and there will be a noticeable effect on the size and consistency of shot groups.

Ammunition is another important accuracy consideration.

While reloading offers the hunter an opportunity to tailor ammunition to a specific rifle, there are other options that are less expensive and time consuming. Select ammunition with the proper bullet performance on white-tailed deer and try several brands to see what is most accurate in your rifle.

Today, there's a much wider variety of factory-loaded ammunition available, including cartridges loaded with premium bullets. In the past, premium bullets were only available to hunters who reloaded. Don't overlook some of the reduced-recoil loads, which sometimes deliver much better accuracy.

New rifles have a break-in period, maybe as much as 100 rounds, before they deliver optimum accuracy.

Proper cleaning of the rifle's bore from the beginning is imperative. The bore of a new rifle should be cleaned before firing it and cleaned about every 20 shots in the beginning.

Clean the rifle from the breech, never the bore, with a one-piece cleaning rod. If the barrel crown is damaged it will ruin the rifle's accuracy. Even the smallest nick at the muzzle will allow gases to escape to one side, affecting the bullet's flight as it leaves the muzzle.

Cleaning supplies should include bore solvent, cotton patches and bronze rifle brushes. Never use stainless steel brushes because they damage the barrel's rifling.

The final step is sighting in your rifle and practicing at various distances in situations similar to how you will be hunting.

All this attention to detail along with the time and money invested will pay dividends for many years to come. You'll have an accurate rifle that you can hunt with for a lifetime.

Several wildlife management areas in Kentucky have 100-yard shooting ranges open to public use. For information, log on to the Kentucky Fish and Wildlife's homepage at fw.ky.gov. Click on the "Maps and Online Services" tab, then "Other KDFWR Maps" and scroll down to "Shooting Ranges."

Cable Television Attachment Charges – Rate CTAC

	Current	Proposed
Attachment Charge per year for each attachment to pole:	$5.40	$10.01

Curtailable Service Rider 10 – Rider CSR10

	Current (per kW)	Proposed (Per kVA)
Monthly Demand Credit:
Primary	($5.50)	($2.80)
Transmission	($5.40)	($2.75)
Non-Compliance Charge:	$16.00	$16.00

Proposed Contract Option: Removes restriction that KU may only use physical curtailment during system reliability events. Also changes contract options' demand from a 15-minute demand basis to the one the customer's standard rate schedule uses.

Curtailable Service Rider 30 – Rider CSR30

	Current (per kW)	Proposed (Per kVA)
Monthly Demand Credit per kW:
Primary	($4.40)	($2.30)
Transmission	($4.30)	($2.25)
Non-Compliance Charge per kW:	$16.00	$16.00

Load Reduction Incentive Rider – Rider LRI

Current Rate	Up to $0.30 per kWh
Proposed Rate	This rate schedule is proposed to be eliminated.

Standard Rider for Excess Facilities – Rider EF

Current Rate
Customer shall pay for excess facilities by:
Monthly Charge for Leased Facilities:	1.54%
Monthly Charge for Facilities Supported
By a One-Time CIAC Payment:	0.74%

Proposed Rate

No adjustment in the monthly charge for a replacement of facilities will be made during the initial five (5) year term of contract.

Customer shall pay for excess facilities by:

- (a) Making a monthly Excess Facilities charge payment equal to the installed cost of the excess facilities times the following percentage:
- | | |
|--|-------|
| Percentage with No Contribution-in-Aid-of-Construction | 1.28% |
|--|-------|
- (b) Making a one-time Contribution-in-Aid-of-Construction equal to the installed cost of the excess facilities plus a monthly Excess Facilities Charge payment equal to the installed cost of the excess facilities times the following percentage:
- | | |
|---|-------|
| Percentage with Contribution-in-Aid-of-Construction | 0.49% |
|---|-------|

Standard Rider for Redundant Capacity Charge – Rider RC

	Current (per kW)	Proposed (Per kVA)
Capacity Reservation Charge per Month:
Secondary Distribution	$0.85	$1.55
Primary Distribution	$0.68	$0.99

Standard Rider for Supplemental or Standby Service – Rider SS

	Current (per kW)	Proposed (Per kVA)
Contract Demand per month:
Secondary	$6.54	$12.91
Primary	$6.17	$12.35
Transmission	$5.99	$11.17

Availability of Service: Text addition clarifies that KU has no obligation to supply non-firm service to a customer-generator unless the customer seeks supplemental or standby service under Rider SS. This requirement does not apply to Net Metering Service (Rider NMS).

Temporary and/or Seasonal Electric Service Rider TS

Availability of Service: Text change clarifies that service is available when it is not necessary for KU to install permanent facilities.

Conditions: Customer will pay for non-salvageable materials plus a monthly charge for the salvageable equipment at the Percentage With No Contribution in-Aid-of-Construction specified on the Excess Facilities Rider.

Real-Time Pricing Rider RTP

Current Rate:	Billing under this Rider is formulaic.
Proposed Rate:	This rate schedule is proposed to be eliminated.

Standard Rate for Low Emission Vehicle Service – Rate LEV

	Current	Proposed
Basic Service Charge per Month:	$8.50	$13.00
Energy Charge per kWh:
Off-Peak Hours	$0.04904	$ 0.05078
Intermediate Hours	$0.07005	$ 0.07254
Peak Hours	$0.13315	$ 0.13788

Availability of Service: Clarifies that rate is available to customers eligible for Rate RS or GS where the GS service is used in conjunction with an RS service to provide service to a detached garage and energy usage is no more than 300 kWh per month.

Meter Test Charge

Current Rate	$60.00
Proposed Rate	$75.00

Disconnecting and Reconnecting Service Charge

Current Rate	$25.00
Proposed Rate	$28.00

Meter Pulse Charge

Current Rate:	$9.00 per month per installed set of pulse-generating equipment
Proposed Rate:	$15.00 per month per installed set of pulse-generating equipment

Customer Deposits

Kentucky Utilities Company is proposing no change to the required Customer Deposit for residential electric customers served under Residential Rate RS from the current amount of $135.00 (0% increase), and the required Customer Deposit for general service customers served under General Service Rate GS from the current amount of $220.00 (0% increase). Text change states when Rate GS deposit may be waived in conjunction with taking service under Rate RS.

Kentucky Utilities Company proposes to change the text of the following electric tariffs: General Service Rate GS, All Electric School Rate AES, Power Service Rate PS, Time-of-Day Secondary Service Rate TODS, Time-of-Day Primary Service Rate TODP, Retail Transmission Service Rate RTS, Fluctuating Load Service Rate FLS, Street Lighting Service Rate ST. LT, Private Outdoor Lighting Rate P.O.LT, Cable Television Attachment Charges Rate CTAC, Curtailable Service Rider CSR10, Curtailable Service Rider CSR30, Excess Facilities Rider EF, Redundant Capacity Rider RC, Supplemental/Standby Service Rider SS, Rider IL for Intermittent Loads, Temporary/Seasonal Service Rider TS, Large Green Energy Rider LGE, Low Emission Vehicle Service Rate LEV, Fuel Adjustment Clause FAC, Demand Side Management Cost Recovery Mechanism DSM, Environmental Cost Recovery Surcharge ECR, and the Terms and Conditions.

Changes to the Terms and Conditions include proposed clarifications on terms and conditions for determining customer rate assignments, as well as when standby or supplemental service must be purchased if customer desires non-firm service.

Although KU is not proposing to change the text of its Fuel Adjustment Clause ("FAC"), other than the correction of a minor typographical error in Paragraph (3), it is proposing to recover certain costs through the FAC to ensure that the correct amounts are collected through base rates and the FAC.

Complete copies of the proposed tariffs containing text changes and proposed rates may be obtained by contacting Lonnie E. Bellar, Kentucky Utilities Company at 220 West Main Street, Louisville, Kentucky, 502-627-4830, or visiting Kentucky Utilities Company's website at www.lge-ku.com.

The foregoing rates reflect a proposed annual increase in revenues of approximately 6.5% to Kentucky Utilities Company.

The estimated amount of the annual change and the average monthly bill to which the proposed electric rates will apply for each electric customer class is as follows:

Electric Rate Class	Annual $ Increase	Annual % Increase	Mthly Bill $ Increase	Mthly Bill % Increase
Residential	$37,381,886	8.03%	$ 7.41	8.03%
General Service	$ 9,061,201	4.97%	$ 9.20	4.97%

The rates contained in this notice are the rates proposed by Kentucky Utilities Company; however, the Public Service Commission may order rates to be charged that differ from the proposed rates contained in this notice.

Notice is further given that any corporation, association, body politic or person with a substantial interest in the matter may by written request, within thirty (30) days after publication of the notice of the proposed rate changes, request to intervene. The motion shall be submitted to the Public Service Commission, 211 Sower Boulevard, P. O. Box 615, Frankfort, Kentucky 40601, and shall set forth the grounds for the request, including the status and interest of the party. Intervention may be granted beyond the thirty (30) day period for good cause shown. Any person who has been granted intervention may obtain copies of the application and any other filing made by the utility by contacting Lonnie E. Bellar, Vice President – State Regulation and Rates, Kentucky Utilities Company, c/o LG&E and KU Energy LLC, 220 West Main Street, Louisville, Kentucky, 502-627-4830.

A copy of the application and testimony shall be available for public inspection at the office of Kentucky Utilities Company, 100 Quality Street, Lexington, Kentucky, or the Public Service Commission, 211 Sower Boulevard, Frankfort, Kentucky.

A copy of this Notice and the proposed tariff, once filed, shall also be available for public inspection on Kentucky Utilities Company's website at www.lge-ku.com.

AN ORDINANCE RELATING TO THE AMENDMENT OF THE ANDERSON COUNTY ZONE ORDINANCE AND MAP ORDINANCE NO. 2012-4 SUMMARY

Be it ordained by the Anderson Fiscal Court, Commonwealth of Kentucky.

SECTION I

The Anderson Fiscal Court has considered the record before the Lawrenceburg/Anderson County, Kentucky Joint Planning Commission in its Docket No. 12-001 including the record of the public hearing held by the Planning Commission on April 10, 2012 and the actions and recommendation of the Planning Commission and its staff as set out in the minutes of its April 10, 2012 meeting.

The Anderson Fiscal Court concurs in and adopts the reasons and findings of the Planning Commission for said zoning change and approves and accepts the recommendations of the Commission in this matter as set out in its minutes.

SECTION II

More specifically, the Anderson Fiscal Court concurs in the findings of the Planning Commission and adopts said findings as its own.

SECTION III

Therefore the Zoning Map of Anderson County, Kentucky is hereby amended as it affects the property described here in from A-1 (Agricultural District) to I-1 (Light Industrial District). The property so rezoned, owned by Wild Turkey Distillery, 1417 Versailles Road, Lawrenceburg, Kentucky. Property is located approximately 2 miles east of the intersection of East Woodford Street, Hilltop Drive and Bluebird Drive, and is situated across from Tyrone Road, Lawrenceburg, Kentucky.

This Ordinance shall be effective from and after its passage, approval, attestation and publication as required by law.

GIVEN FIRST READING ON THE 6th day of June 2012.

PUBLISHED in The Anderson News on the 20th day of June 2012.

GIVEN SECOND READING, PASSED, ADOPTED AND APPROVED by the Fiscal Court of Anderson County, Kentucky, upon motion of Magistrate Buddy Sims, seconded by Magistrate Kenny Barnett, at a duly convened meeting thereof held on the 3rd day of July 2012.

Anderson County Judge/Executive

ATTEST: Linda Edington, Deputy County Clerk

NOTICE OF SALE SPECIAL MASTER COMMISSIONER OF ANDERSON CIRCUIT COURT

By virtue of orders of the Anderson Circuit Court in the below listed actions, I shall proceed to offer for sale, at public auction, the real estate described herein to the highest and best bidder at the Anderson County Courthouse, Lawrenceburg, Kentucky, on Thursday, July 12, 2012 at or about 1:00 p.m. E.D.T., which real estate is located in Anderson County, Kentucky, to-wit:

SALE NO. 1: JPMorgan Chase Bank v. Glen A. Coulter, et al., Civil Action No. 11-CI-256, Anderson Circuit Court, Anderson County, Kentucky; said property being more commonly known as 559 Hickory Road, Lawrenceburg, Kentucky 40342, of record in Deed Book 202, Page 659 in the County Clerk's Office, Anderson County, Kentucky.

The foregoing parcel of real estate shall be sold on terms of cash deposit or cashier's check or certified check in the amount of the purchase price, or 10% down at the time of sale and the balance thereof due and payable in thirty (30) days after date of sale. The purchaser(s) of said real estate shall have the right to pay all or any part of the purchase price by cashier's or certified check, the Special Master Commissioner shall take from the purchaser(s) by cashier's or certified check the sum of 10% down and a good and sufficient bond with surety acceptable to the Master Commissioner payable to the Special Master Commissioner for the balance of said purchase price, and bearing interest from date of sale at the rate of 12% per annum until paid in full. Compliance with the foregoing terms shall be at the time of the sale and the requirement of good surety shall not be waived by the Special Master Commissioner under any circumstance other than prior order of the Court. The bid of any purchaser not complying with said terms shall be rejected by the Master Commissioner and the property immediately resold.

Each tract or parcel of real estate shall be sold subject to the following:

A. All ad valorem real estate taxes, currently due or delinquent, for which the purchaser(s) shall receive no credit against the purchase price;

B. Easements, restrictions, stipulations and agreements of record in the Office of the Clerk of the County Court of Anderson County, Kentucky;

C. Assessments for public improvements levied against the property;

D. Any facts which an inspection and accurate survey of the property may disclose; and

E. Any and all planning and zoning regulations imposed upon the subject property.

SALE NO. 1: The amount of money to be raised is the sum of $83,772.66 plus interest and costs as set out in a Judgment and Order of Sale of the Anderson Circuit Court dated June 6, 2012.

MASTER

COMMISSIONER'S NOTE

All prospective purchasers are advised to fully understand and consider the following:

1. All properties are sold strictly as is, with no warranties expressed or implied. Properties shall be sold inside the front door of the Courthouse or on the steps thereof, weather and traffic noise permitting. No prior inspections are arranged by the Court or the Special Master Commissioner in that properties are often occupied as of day of sale.

2. Risk of loss to improvements to real estate shifts to purchaser as of date of sale. Insurance should be placed immediately by successful bidder.

3. All properties sold for less than two-thirds of appraised value subject to current owner statutory right of redemption pursuant to Kentucky Revised Statutes.

4. Rights of possession given to purchasers with deed, but holdover occupants of real estate may require additional Court action by purchaser to acquire actual possession.

5. Master Commissioner's deed warrants title only so far as authorized by the judgment, orders and proceedings of the Court, but no further. Independent title examination by successful purchaser is recommended prior to confirmation of sale.

MASTER

COMMISSIONER'S SALE

In order to comply with the orders of the Anderson Circuit Court, the Master Commissioner will sell the property described in the following actions on Thursday, July 26, 2012, at 11:00 a.m. in the Anderson County Courthouse, Lawrenceburg, Kentucky. The property shall be sold to raise the amounts hereinafter set forth, together with interest and the costs of this action, and upon the following terms and conditions (unless otherwise indicated):

(1) At the time of the sale, the successful bidder shall either pay the purchase price in full, or make a deposit of at least ten percent (10%) of the purchase price, with the unpaid balance on credit for thirty (30) days. In the event the successful bidder elects to credit the balance, he or she will be required to post bond and immediately furnish surety acceptable to the Master Commissioner. The bond shall be for the unpaid purchase price and bear interest at twelve percent (12%) per annum until paid in full.

(2) PLEASE NOTE: The real estate SHALL

BE SOLD SUBJECT TO ALL city, state, county, and school real estate taxes, whether current or delinquent, unless a Certificate of Delinquency has been recorded in the Anderson County Clerk's Office and the holder of that Certificate is a party to the action.

(3) Where the real estate has insurable improvements, the successful bidder shall, at his or her own expense, carry fire and extended coverage insurance on said improvements from the date of sale until the purchase price is fully paid, to the extent of the Court appraised value of said improvements or the unpaid balance of the purchase price, whichever is less, at a minimum, with a loss clause payable to the Master Commissioner or the appropriate Plaintiff. Failure of the successful bidder to effect such insurance shall not affect the validity of the sale or the successful bidder's liability thereunder, but shall entitle, but not require, the Plaintiff(s) to effect said insurance and furnish the policy or evidence thereof to the Master Commissioner, if it so desires, and the premium thereon or the property portion thereof shall be charged to the successful bidder as the successful bidder's cost.

(4) The property shall otherwise be sold free and clear of any right, title and interest of all parties to the action and of their liens and encumbrances thereon excepting easements and restrictions of record in the Anderson County Clerk's Office, and such right of redemption which may exist in favor of the United States of America or the Defendant(s), and any matters disclosed by an accurate survey and inspection of the property.

That's how many Kentucky adults read a daily, Sunday or weekly newspaper during an average week.

That's more than 5 out of 6 people.

And truth be told, we like to think that 6th person might be listening while one of the other five reads out loud.
